Thoughts Of Youth

Thoughts (studious and wondering), thoughts (spirited and competitive), and more thoughts (romantic and reminiscent) circulate through the heart of Arlington High School. Combined, these are very special thoughts — the thoughts of youth.

Goals and ambitions are in the minds of all high school youth; goals such as receiving an "A" on a final exam, winning that all-important game, being liked by classmates, and, most important, having hopes turned into realities by faith and hard work.

Studious thoughts of youth are displayed not only through homework, term papers, and semester exams, but also by wondering and seeking reasons for things that we have learned in the classroom. Because today's youth will someday be responsible for determining the destiny of the world, our thoughts must begin to develop now through serious study.

Competitive thoughts run high in clubs, classrooms, and sports. We compete for honors in talent, skill, effort, and leadership. Cheerleaders, Homecoming floats, tense crowds, and pep assemblies bring to mind the active, spirited characteristics of youth. The feeling of being a part of the student body in spirit, faith, and loyalty gives satisfaction to many.

Long after the present Arlington students graduate, they will still have reminiscences of youth — both happy and sad memories of past experiences. They will romanticize the aura of splendor of gayly bedecked dances and the warm afterglow of times spent among good friends. They will be able to look back over the years and realize how their thoughts of youth and of maturity have created their individual philosophies of life.

In this edition of the Heights we have tried to show the thoughts, dreams, and ideas of the students at Arlington High School. We hope that in future years this yearbook will enable you to recapture the thoughts of your youth.

Striving For Schoolwide Harmony - Administration

Concentrating on an important decision, Mr. Slichenmyer, Superintendent of School District 214, very seriously conducts his work.

Pausing to think about the newly completed high school and of the plans for the future year is Dr. Gilbert, assistant superintendent.

School Board

Front Row: Mr. John A. Haas, Mrs. Eugenia Chapman, Mr. George H. Paris. Second Row: Mr. Charles R. Fyfe, Mr. E. Charles Lockwood, Jr., Mr. Arthur E. Aronson, Mr. Frank J. Smith.

Mr. Waara, principal of Arlington High, reads a special announcement over the P.A. system, one of the first duties of his busy day.

Involved in one of his many tasks as assistant principal, Mr. Rowe pauses while reading a report pertaining to the school's activities.

The Administration is one of the most important elements of a school. To assure the high standards of the school is the main objective of every administrator. It is the specific job of each of these men to help meet this common goal.

Mr. Harold Slichenmyer, Superintendent of High School District 214, is yearly confronted with many perplexing problems. 1964 was no exception. Plans were made for the opening of the fourth school in the district, Wheeling High School, in September 1964. The building of this school brought new problems, such as district boundaries, and the hiring of a new teaching staff. Mr. Slichenmyer also served as faculty representative to the Board of Education, bringing the proposals of the faculty to the board, as well as putting into effect the adopted policies of the School Board.

The Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent was Dr. Gilbert. He aided the Superintendent by interviewing and selecting new teachers. The summer school program and curriculum development also came under the counsel of Dr. Gilbert.

Elected by the citizens of this area, the School Board met frequently to discuss problems, policies, and plans of expansion of the high schools in the district. The addition of a new school added to their work. During the past school year the School Board was headed by President John A. Haas. President Haas was aided in his work by elected secretary and board member, Mrs. E. Chapman.

The top man at Arlington High School was Mr. Bruno Waara, Principal. The jobs of Mr. Waara were many and varied. Besides acting as supervisor, he attended faculty committee and department meetings at Arlington to make sure that the school was run smoothly and efficiently. He also coordinated the T.P.C.

Mr. Rowe had the title of the Assistant Principal of Arlington High School during 1963-1964. His chief responsibility was to keep the permanent records of each student. In addition to making necessary schedule changes, he was kept busy with the planning of the winter and summer school programs. His main objective was to strive for better teacher-student relationships.

Mr. Reat, a newcomer to Arlington, was Dean of Students this year. He dealt with student behavior, tardiness, and maintenance of the school building.

Mr. Bohac was positioned in the newly created role of Director of Student Activities. His job was to co-ordinate student-teacher clubs and activities.

Striving for conjunction with the Administration, the secretaries at Arlington worked at various jobs. Among these tasks were sorting the mail, typing, selling tickets to the games, and working in the Nurse's Office and library. These duties well-performed were necessary to the smooth and efficient operation of Arlington High School.

Class began at 7:40, but the counselors in 109 were already hard at work. As the bell rang, the Counseling Office began to fill with many students, who were anxious to drop or add a subject or who were trying to make the minimum of sixteen credits to pass high school or to get into college.

The counselors had to be able to help a student arrange courses to provide the experience the students would need later in life. Knowing that the future of many students rested in their decisions, the advisors helped to pick careers and colleges with great care. In solving the scholastic and personal problems of the students, it was of benefit to the counselors to know the history and ability of each individual that they aided. They examined many records.

Year after year the counselors handle many types of registrations. Freshmen entering high school and seniors entering college required the help of the advisors in 109. Interpreting test scores was also a familiar job as students were constantly involved in freshmen and sophomore tests, college board exams, or scholastic tests.

Many counselors served as teachers in study halls and classes. Besides being responsible for these duties, the counselors were divided among the classes to sponsor the class activities. Mr. Lindemann and Miss Hampton led the Senior Class. Mr. Carioti, Mr. Stansbury, and Miss Craig guided the Junior Class. The sophomores were led by Mr. Erickson, Mrs. Claney, and Miss Bazik. Freshmen Class counselors were Mr. O'Driscoll and Miss Johnson.

With keen interest senior botany students Sharon Rajala, Chuck Fenner, and Harry Ruth observe various aspects of plant life with Mr. Johnson.

What goes "zip" when it moves, "bop" when it stops, and "whirr" when it stands still? Mr. Hruby explains it is an analog computer.

Filling the minds of many Arlington students this year were such things as amoebas, chemical bonds, vectors, and magnetic force. Students learned about the nature of living things, about forces and properties of nature, and about relationships of phenomena in our world.

There were two required science courses in the Arlington curriculum. Biology, usually taken by freshmen, was one and physical science, normally a sophomore course, was the other. The biology course consisted of the study of plant and animal life. The students confirmed known facts through dissection and the use of the microscope. Physical science combined the study of chemistry and physics and provided a background for further studies in these fields.

Most chemistry students were juniors. They studied the composition and changes of matter. Much work was done in the laboratory, experimenting with chemicals.

The two science courses that were offered to seniors were physics and botany-zoology. Mass and energy comprised the study of physics, while the students of botany-zoology studied the habits of animal life the first semester and various phases of plant life the second semester.

Cooking Up A Future & Sewing Down An "A"

Two courses offered to students were homemaking and industrial arts. These classes provided training in two important practical areas.

Besides the basic courses of cooking and sewing, there were advanced courses in tailoring, interior decorating, and scientific cookery. Under the instruction of qualified teachers in these fields, girls learned to plan and budget, as well as how to operate a home. In dressmaking students learned the techniques of sewing, the difference in fabrics, and the styling of fashions.

The courses in industrial education offered a basic, as well as an advanced, study of the mechanical arts.

In the woodworking course students developed skills using woodworking equipment and constructing items for the home and recreational purposes. Emphasis was made on their workmanship, achievement, dexterity, and safety.

Home Economics

In this day of the Space Age with its constant international tension and fast moving pace, it is necessary for people to view world affairs with open minds. With the tremendous advancement of communications, people have become close neighbors with a variety of unlike colors, customs, and convictions of their own. To help students cope with people of differing beliefs, economics, and governing powers, as well as to explain our own country, was the goal of the Social Science Department.

This year, the department undertook a change in curriculum. Better methods of teaching were applied; controversial subjects were examined; and an effort to avoid overlapping was made. Arlington, as a pilot school, succeeded very well in this experiment.

Since it is vital to everyone who wants to become a responsible citizen, American history was a required social science course. This subject was designed to explain the background of the American way of life and to help students use this background wisely.

Another year's credit in social science was advised for those students preparing for colleges. Arlington offered world history, sociology, and one-semester courses in Far Eastern history, economics, political geography, and current history. These are helpful to the college-bound student.

"I don't agree with Dr. Spock's discipline theory," says sociology student Mirrel Kephart as Merry Lee Auer and Dick Olivares sit by.

New Drivers Lawfully Learn Starts And Stops

Did you ever feel nervous when a car drove by with a "Student Driver" sign on it? You need not have been afraid, because several precautions had been taken to insure your safety!

Every Arlington High School student was required to take thirty hours of classroom driver education in order to graduate. Behind-the-wheel was also offered, but was optional. Classroom instruction, a required course, gave pre-driving information to students. It taught them the fundamentals, attitudes, and mechanics of driving.

Five instructors, Mr. Eckert, Mr. Attis, Mr. Baker, Mr. Walthouse, and Mr. Chernicky taught classroom ed. Behind-the-wheel was a course taken in cars that were equipped with two sets of brakes, one for the instructor and one for the driver. Driving on roads near Arlington, gave the students an opportunity to gain actual driving experience.

As Sue Boylan, Scott Pickett, Sandy Sefried, Sue Barnes, and Alan Kramer listen intently, Mr. Eckert demonstrates the function of the depth-perception machine to the Driver's Education students.

Half-time entertainment provided by the Choralliers accompanied by a guitarist adds to the festivities of the Homecoming football game as strains of "If I Had A Hammer" echo through the autumn night.

Though the song sings of seventy-six trombones, Dick Larson, Larry Bulinski, and Rollie Banta play it on their three French horns for the Music Department's annual operetta, and "That's music, man!"

Music Department

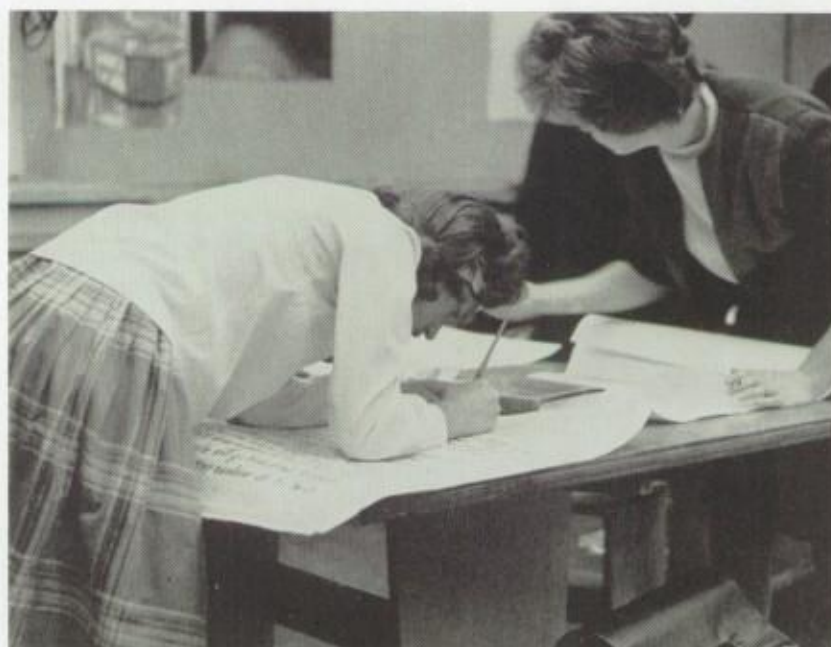

Mr. John A. Hicks, B.A., Choralliers. Mr. Fredrick C. Schmoyer, B.A., Band. Mr. Boyd White, B.A., Department Chairman.

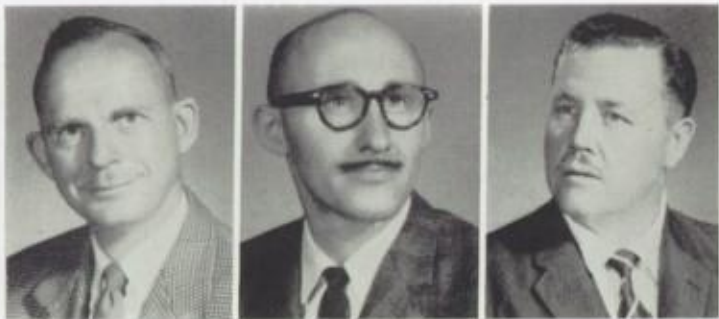

"Pianissimo," "mezzo forte," and "crescendo" were a few of the many musical terms with which all music students were acquainted. Such phrases were only part of the training that music students received from Mr. Boyd White and Mr. John Hicks, the vocal directors, and from Mr. Frederick Schmoyer, the instrumental director.

Music students learned more than just terms, though. They received good training in voice production or in playing an instrument, depending upon the organization in which they were enrolled. From Freshman Girls' Chorus and Freshman Boys' Chorus to Senior Choir, Mr. White and Mr. Hicks concentrated on developing voices to the fullest. Similarly, all band and orchestra students received training from Mr. Schmoyer in the fundamentals of their particular instrument. They also learned to cooperate and to combine their special talents with others in the various school bands and in the orchestra.

This year's operetta production was "The Music Man." While seniors Dawn Nebel and Ray Schmeiser danced and sang as lead characters, the orchestra accompanied them.

Art

Mr. Edward Fischer, B.A. Ed., M.A. Ed., Department Chairman, Orchesis productions. Mr. F. W. Michaelis, B.A.E., Art Club. Mr. James F. Walker, B.F.A., M.A., M.F.A., Art Club, Orchesis productions.

Mr. Edward Fisher, the head of the Art Department, believes that art is for everyone. The department offers courses which suit the individual interests of students.

Students studied the basic fundamentals of art, such as color, texture, and dimension in Art I and in Art II. In Art III and Art IV students had three types of courses from which to choose. These three were commercial and advertising art, fine art, and a combination of commercial, advertising, and fine art. These courses gave a more advanced use of the elements of design.

For students with a natural ability in art, there was an honors course. The primary purpose of this class was to allow students to express and develop ideas beyond the abilities of most students in other classes. Students were expected to demonstrate initiative in furthering their own artistic ability.

Offered for only one semester, general art primarily emphasized arts and crafts. Students learned the same basics as were taught in Art I, but in a condensed form.

Lined up at the blackboard are four freshmen algebra students: Jean Unander, Dennis Taggart, Cynthia Frandsen, and Jeff Vance, valiantly attempting to show fellow students the principle of factors.

Mathematics, a necessity in today's scientific world, continued to change at Arlington High School. Naturally, the basic courses weren't changed, but the Math Department slowly began to introduce new methods of teaching.

One of the special programs in existence at Arlington was UICSM (The University of Illinois Commission on School Mathematics). This program, begun at Arlington in 1960, encompassed four years of high school math in 1964. Another new program was SMSG (School Mathematics Study Group). Both of these programs used many modern concepts retaining sufficient material of the traditional type to insure functional competence.

During the past year experiments were conducted on the senior level. After they had finished Advanced Algebra II, the students from one class were instructed in solid geometry, symbolic logic, and analytic geometry. It was necessary to introduce these new courses, as the others, which had previously been taught on a senior level, were now taught earlier. These trial courses offered college-bound seniors a better preparation for their freshman college courses in mathematics. The faculty and administration took these experiments as an opportunity to discover which new courses would best fit into the math program.

While Joanne Boehmer works diligently in the background, Gerry DeZonna benefits from Mrs. Moulton's advice on typing techniques.

Clicking of typewriter keys and the scratching of pens were familiar sounds to business students. From the note-hand-typing course to vocational typing, students learned the fundamentals of office work.

It seemed that more and more Cardinals were enrolling in the business program. This popularity was due to the fact that the Business Department, headed by Mrs. Faulkner, prepared its students for future jobs, and also offered courses that were helpful to college bound students.

To prepare students for clerical or secretarial work, the curriculum included such courses as business English, dictation-transcription, and office practice. The students were given training through assigned duties in the school store and administrative offices. These courses were useful even to those who did not plan to enter business.

Recommended to the seniors preparing to attend college was notehand-typing. This course was designed in order to help students take notes and prepare for exams.

Mr. Richard R. Seibel, B.S., M.S., Diversified Education Club. Not pictured: Mr. C. Derrel Darling, B.S., M.S., Diversified Occupations.

Distributive Education and Diversified Occupations were courses offered at Arlington designed to give on-the-job occupational training to students sixteen years and older. Students enrolled in these courses attended classes in the morning and went to work in the afternoon. Many of the students were also employed on Saturdays and during vacations. Pupils enrolled in D.E. and D.O. were required to work a minimum of fifteen hours and a maximum of thirty hours per week at their place of employment.

Distributive Education was for students interested in retail distribution of products. During 1963-1964 they read books on retailing and building displays. All activities were supervised by the D.E. teacher and sponsor, Mr. Seibel.

Diversified Occupations class was directed towards the students who wanted technical training in specific fields. This class was sponsored by Mr. Darling who was also in charge of supervising students while they were working.

To Unite The World Through Study Of Languages

Arlington's Language Department strived not only to teach the language well, but also to instruct the students in the culture, history, and characteristics of the different countries. The languages offered were French, Spanish, Latin, German, and Russian.

Any person familiar with the Language Department was also familiar with the language lab. In the lab a class responded to exercises directed by the teacher. The teacher was able to check the progress each student made in proficiency and fluency. The lab enabled the teacher to give individual attention to students with a particular problem.

Because of the great amount of time needed to teach the language, students were not always able to delve into the cultural aspects as fully as they would have liked to. The language clubs at Arlington provided students with a chance to get extra knowledge that they could not receive in classrooms.

Each year the language clubs collaborate to present the Pan-Language Banquet, during which each club gives a program showing some customs, traditions, and styles of their adopted country. Foreign dishes are also enjoyed.

Unflustered as the result of experience, Martha Hodge and Lynn Lasswell nonchalantly present their French dialogue for the class.

Latin students listen to Mr. Gorman's indisputable statement: "Magister est optimus eh benignus," meaning teacher is good and kind.

"But livre isn't Spanish!" cries Doug Nelson as he, Barb Krause, Dennis Smith, Glenda Busch play a game of Spanish Scrabble.

Gym Produces Healthy Bodies And Alert Minds

"One, two, three . . . One, two, three . . . One, two, three . . .," chants a struggling junior gym class while doing its calisthenics.

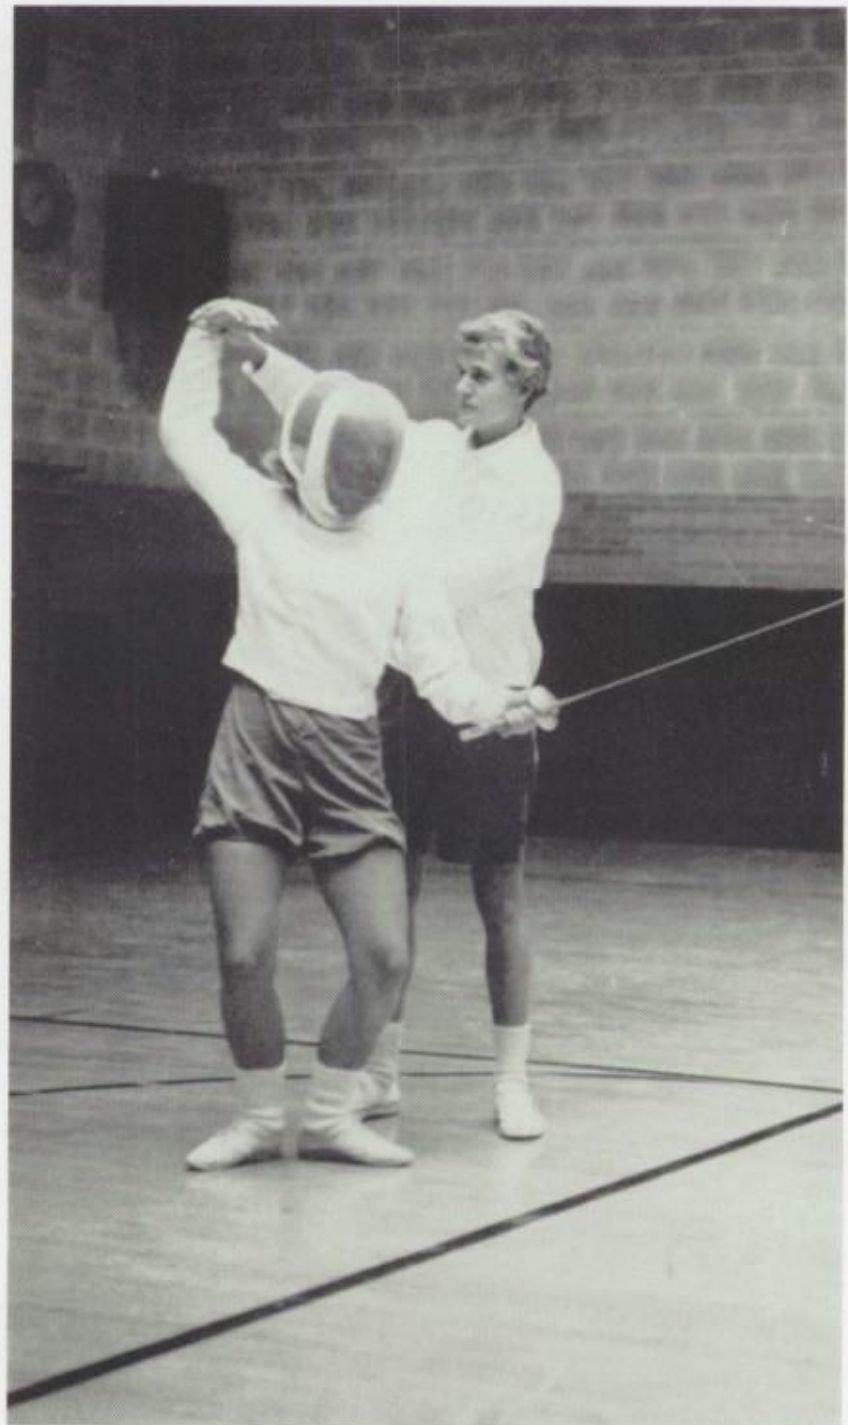

"Line up for exercises!" was a cry familiar to Arlington High students. Freshmen and sophomores who had gym every day heard it more often than the upperclassmen who had gym only every other day. The juniors had gym two days a week the first semester and three the next. The seniors' schedule was just the opposite.

Fall and the start of school brought physical fitness tests. These twice-repeated tests include the soft ball throw, broad jump, 50 yard dash, and 600 yard run-walk.

Students participated in football, hockey, soccer, tennis, or archery in the fall. Winter classes had basketball, volleyball, or gymnastics. The girls also had folk dancing and fencing. With spring came track, baseball, golf, and tennis.

Girls could take modern dance instead of regular P.E. if they wished. Co-ed square dancing was an added feature for upperclassmen. Freshmen and sophomores participated in co-recreational volleyball.

The P.E. Department had limited classes for students not allowed to participate in the regular gym activities.

English is universal in its use and its popularity. In many countries it is a popular second language. Arlington recognized the importance of English and put great emphasis on its study. Classes centered around two main divisions—literature and grammar.

During the freshman year students were given a review of formal grammar and its usage. The literature of recent American authors was also studied. In the sophomore year one semester was devoted to speech and the other to the study of literature. Both were rounded out with grammar. Junior classes were concerned with early American literature and its development. Work was done with different authors to study their style of writing. The more advanced grammar prepared students for college and life out of school. Senior English was primarily for college preparatory students as it prepared them for the advanced work of college.

This year Mrs. Meyer, Arlington's speech correctionist, and Mrs. Larson collaborated to bring the sophomore students with speech problems together for group therapy. Before giving their speeches in class, the students taped them to find their diction errors. These students received help in overcoming their speech impediments while participating in the regular English program.

Miss Leonhard was head of the English Department.

Thinking of a topic for speech class presents a problem for some Sophomores, but Ed Graves solves it by riding his unicycle to class.

English Knowledge — Necessary To Achieve Goals

Enjoying poetry, junior honor English students, Ron Saidlkowski and Lynn Maas, read very famous works.

Creative students, Sue Herbeck and Bob Hoban, try to produce material worthy of the literary supplement.

Many departments at Arlington performed special services that were often overlooked by students. A student might have noticed how much he got to eat, but he seldom realized the work put into the preparation of a meal. A competent cafeteria staff, under the direction of Miss Handlin, provided meals for hungry patrons. Mrs. Woolsoncroft, food production supervisor, Mrs. Hill, manager, and Mrs. Sienkiewicz, bookkeeper, assisted her.

Keeping the school and its grounds presentable was the job of the custodians, headed by Mr. Griesmeyer. Raking leaves, shoveling snow, and mopping floors were some of the duties of the custodians.

The library was one of the most widely used facilities at school. Nearly everyone had an occasion to use its resources. Miss Bopp, head librarian, Miss Boling and Miss Hansen were in charge of its organization.

This year the school health service expanded by having two nurses, Mrs. Hufnagel and Mrs. Morcella. This office kept all the school's health records.

Speech correction was a phase of special services that had limited participation. Mrs. Meyer directed students who needed help in this area. Tape recordings, pattern drills, and other instructional methods were employed.

Adult education classes, directed by Mr. Randle, were held four nights a week. Students could take several of these if they had a counselor's permission.

Through the sea of heads in one of the study halls, Mr. Mueller was seen writing passes. He was the supervisor of physical education study halls.

Mr. Drury organized the audio-visual department, which handled all the slides and tapes for the district. Foreign language recordings, globes, classroom maps, and assemblies were the responsibility of this department.

The little room across the hall from the attendance office contained all the machinery necessary to compute practically any kind of list. Mr. Cole operated the apparatus which deciphered the data. Grade cards, class rank lists, and grade averages were figured in the I.B.M. office.

Service with a smile was the motto of three of the service activities of AH: lab assistants, library assistants and school store representatives.

Aiding the Science Department in physical science, biology, and chemistry classes, lab assistants helped other students in these classes by mixing formulas and aiding in dissections. They also helped teachers by grading tests and keeping the labs in order. To be a lab assistant, students had to forgo their study halls.

Student library assistants served the school by helping the librarians with such things as checking books in and out, carrying library notes, and collecting fines. They were able to work in the library during school hours by giving up their regular study halls.

Open before school and during three lunch shifts, the school store afforded students a handy place to purchase school supplies. The school store representatives ordered and sold the supplies and balanced the finances.

Three of Arlington's organizations helped to see that everything ran smoothly during the school year.

Office guides were seen daily distributing absentee lists, collecting attendance slips, and bringing special announcements to classrooms. Devoting their study halls to helping in the administrative, attendance, or counseling offices, these girls answered phone calls, filed, typed, and kept track of the lost and found department.

The boys in the Audio-Visual Club were seen carrying movie projectors, screens, phonographs, and tape recorders through the halls in order to aid the teachers with their special classroom projects and demonstrations. In addition to the ordinary school day jobs, the boys were also behind the scenes with the sound and lighting effects which were involved in the presentation of assemblies and plays. Working with the valuable audio-visual equipment yielded technical skills.

Boys in Ushers' Club were noted for their black ties and red coats, which they wore while they eliminated confusion on the first day of school, at pep assemblies, athletic contests, plays, concerts, and other special events.

Activities

As Laura Rettberg moves to congratulate her, Sue Colvin jumps for joy as she becomes the queen of the '63 Homecoming weekend.

Climactical Coronation

A hush fell over the gym as Bob Johnston paused and then proceeded to announce the king and queen of the 1963 Homecoming—Jack Lindstrom and Sue Colvin. Tears fell and a crowd of joyous A. H.'ers ran to congratulate the reigning couple at the end of the most emotional moment of the busy week.

As everyone left the gym to watch the parade, all thoughts turned back to Wednesday and Thursday night when ambitious A. H.'ers invaded the home of a lucky float builder and proceeded to throw together a conglomeration of chicken wire, spray paint, and napkins.

Following the crowd, one might have noticed a freshman who, not wishing to deny any of his superiors, carried a mum, bought from an encouraging cheerleader; a pennant, from a desperate National Honor Society member; a raffle ticket, from a towering member of "A" Club; and a Homecoming ribbon and shaker, from a dauntless Student Council representative.

Noises coming from the direction of the band meant the parade was about to begin, so crowds flocked to the edge of the street. Forward march, and away it went with Cardettes, Coronets, floats and all. As the parade approached Arlington, the victorious floats turned off and the others traveled on to meet their fate at the bonfire.

Not long after the end of the parade, the school again became the center of activity as crowds began to assemble to watch our team compete against Downers. The cool weather was invigorating and the game was a big success. At half-time, as the winning floats were announced, three happy groups cheered with pride. The senior float with the theme, "If I Had a Hammer," was given first. Second place went to a junior float, "Pop Go the Trojans," and the seniors came through again for third place with "Downed by the Old Mill Stream."

The festive week was topped off with the Homecoming Dance, "Harvest Interlude," which was sponsored by the "A" Club. The gym was cleverly and tastefully decorated with pumpkins and a replica of a cornfield in one corner, which was meant to represent the spirit of the harvest.

While King Jack Lindstrom and the ecstatic student body look on, Bob Johnston crowns happy Sue Colvin 1964 Homecoming Queen.

With joyful tears and happy smiles, delighted girls rush to congratulate Queen Sue moments after the coronation ceremonies end.

Senior Sue Colvin beams brightly as she and Jack Lindstrom begin their reign as Homecoming king and queen.

Putting the last minute touches on their float, a group of seniors apprehensively awaits completion and the beginning of the parade.

Madly stuffing napkins to meet the approaching deadline, hopeful students busily prepare their float for the oncoming competition.

Days of work go up in flames after the judges make their decision, but the spirit of Homecoming is just beginning for the Cardinals.

How to pin corsages on dates was a problem faced and solved by both sexes as they prepared for Arlington's Homecoming Dance.

Hopes Parade High

Joy runs wild in the faces of these frosh-soph cheerleaders, Lynn Larson and Cindy Flodin, as their team rushes in for a touchdown.

Displaying their Cardinal loyalty, ecstatic fans burst into an uproar loudly hoping for the best during a tense moment on the field.

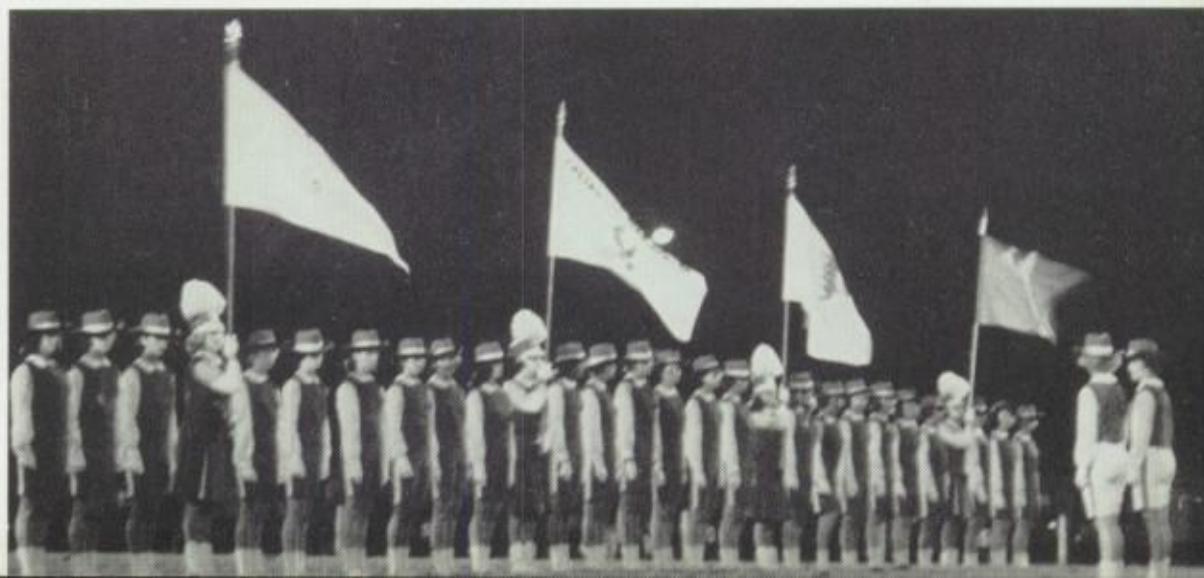

Colorful pom poms fly in the air as the Cardettes perform a fast moving rhythm routine to the song "Bill Bailey."

Urging the Cardinals to victory with a fervent cheer or a hopeful glance, the Homecoming Court shows its school spirit on a cool night.

Thirty Coronets in red and white await the beginning of Tom Dooley to which they will perform their drill.

Teaching Neil Johnson, her escort to the Kickoff Dance, the steps to one of the new dance crazes at Arlington is Junior Lynn Maas.

1-9-6-3 HIKE! The annual Kickoff Dance, held on September 28th by the Junior Class, initiated the 63-64 social season as couples danced to the music of the Jim Cleeman Band. The false ceiling of streamers and pennants was centered by a giant football and spotted by red and white lights. The girls were given miniature pennants upon their arrival at the dance in keeping with the football theme.

On the cold, clear night of December 21st, couples arrived at the first formal dance of the school year. The Christmas Ball, "Snowbound," was decorated with an archway of evergreens through which couples entered the dance. A wintry scene, complete with an old-fashioned sleigh and a caroling snowman, dominated one corner of the gym. In the middle of the ceiling spun the traditional crystal ball, reflecting shimmering lights on the dancers. Senior Laura Rettberg was chosen Christmas Ball Queen by the members of the Del Rene Orchestra after a grand procession of all the senior couples around the dance floor. The Ball court included seniors Dawn Nebel, Nancy Hey, Connie Van Ness, and Carol Auer.

The couples left the dance with a warm feeling of anticipation for the holiday which had just begun so happily.

Nites Of Fun & Fantasy

While Jill Walker and Ed Bradle talk together, Pam Prince and Reid Olson gaze over the balcony upon the couples dancing below.

Radiantly smiling Laura Rettberg is crowned queen of the Christmas Ball by President of the Senior Class, Bob Conti, as all look on.

While Senior Scott Banks carefully fills out the form for prom tickets, Laura Rettberg waits patiently to give him his tickets.

"Presented by the Class of 1965 — the Junior-Senior Prom on May 29, 1964, at Chevy Chase Country Club, Wheeling, Illinois," the dance of the year — the event of the year — the Prom . . . Hopes and dreams became reality as the night finally arrived.

Majestically situated, Chevy Chase was chosen as the spot for the Prom. Because decorations were not allowed to a great extent, the dance was created to be a mood within itself. The theme of "Moonlight and Roses" was reflected in the planning of this dance.

Johnny Marlowe, his fourteen piece band, and a vocalist provided the music for dancing. Variations of the usual music were included during what are ordinarily "breaks." Continuous music was provided throughout the dance.

The coronation ceremony was meant to be one of the most impressive ever created. A regal throne was set up for the reigning queen, who was chosen by the boys of the senior class.

After-the-Prom plans were organized by parents. The night-ride to Nippersink Lodge started it all. After the joy-ride on the decorated train, prom-goers spent Saturday at the lodge, participating in all the activities possible. The trip back to Arlington climaxed the day of memories.

Long Awaited, The Prom Creates Lasting Memories

Members of the theme committee for the 1964 Prom, Jim Hallet, Merrilee Bukowski, Kathy Lill, Judy Paul, and Joy Metz prepare suggestions to be submitted to the Junior Class Board for approval.

Dreaming of the day when she will attend, freshman Jean Unander gazes admiringly at her sister, Jan, who is preparing for the prom.

Age-Old Entertainment

Playing the part of Miss Leighton, the secretary in the fall play, Jan Sauer strikes a pose in hopes of impressing a Hollywood agent.

While four bored bridesmaids look on, Georganne Sedor discusses Carol Walsh's part in one of the early talkies filmed in the play.

Varying expressions on the faces of Brian Reynolds, Doug McDonald, Georganne Sedor, Carol Walsh, and Mary Ann Glover as they reflect different emotions as they travel on the Hollywood bound train in this year's fun-packed, fast-moving fall play.

Performers Adeptly Entertain Enthusiastic Audiences

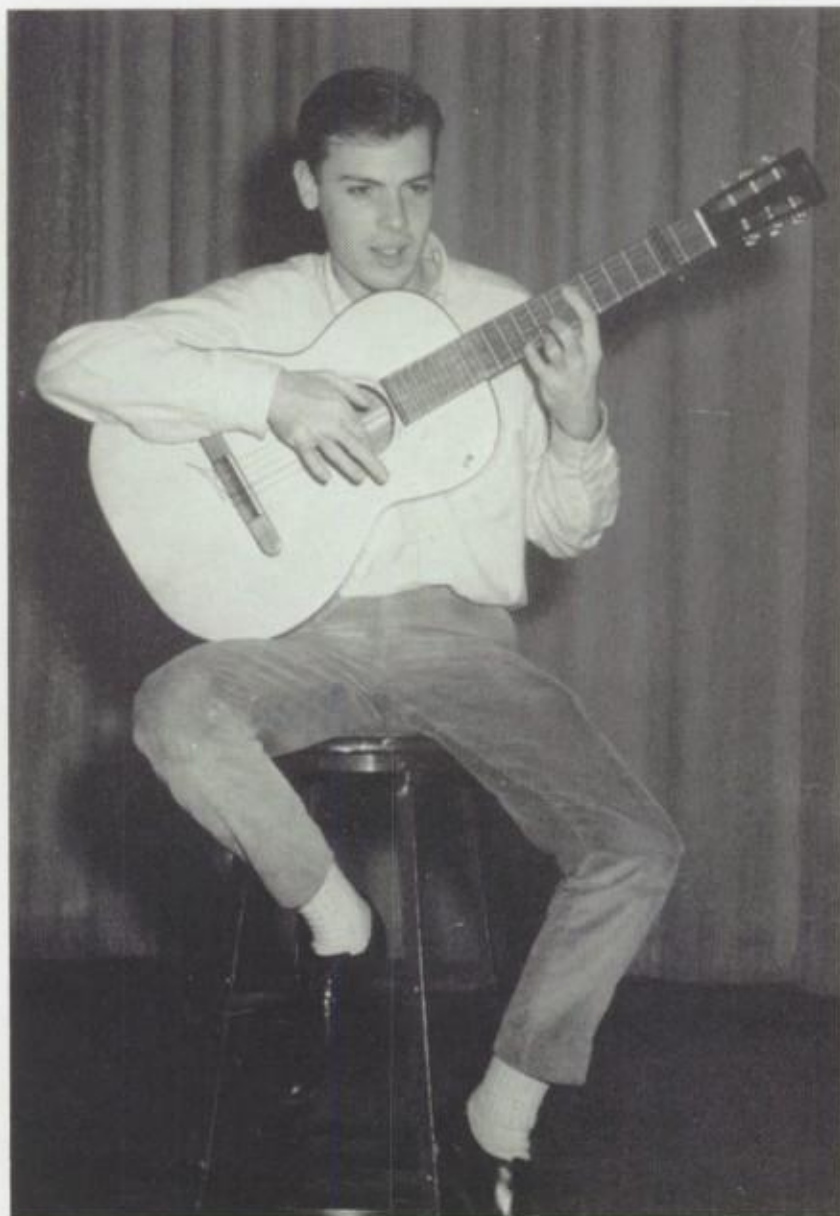

Don Depollo, Kris Swanson, and Kathy Ligon wait for their cues while Sue Stratton practices for the winter play, "Blithe Spirit."

Have you ever noticed someone in the vicinity of the Little Theatre loaded down with books, lamps, shoes, and jewelry? They were not really evacuating the school. It was more likely that the poor, overloaded being was a member of one of the various crews for the fall, mid-winter, or spring play.

This year, the fall play was "Once in a Lifetime," a comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. It was exceptional in that it had a cast of fifty-two students. Both "Once in a Lifetime" and the spring play, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" were directed by Mr. Douglas Murphy. Directed by Miss Lyovonne Trad, "Blithe Spirit" by Noel Coward was this year's mid-winter play. In this English farce, two of the seven cast members played ghosts. For this part they were covered with gray make-up, powdered with purple powder, and their hair was sprayed silver.

The talent show was reinstated in the tradition of Arlington High this fall after a span of two years. Two hundred and fifty students participated in its preparation. Jack Sharpless, a senior at Arlington, was narrator, singing the verses of the title song, "I'll Tell You The Story." The text of the show was written by a group of students with the assistance of the two faculty sponsors, Miss Carol K. Smith and Mr. Mel Johnson.

Demonstrating his vocal ability and guitar skill, the "I'll Tell You The Story" man, Jack Sharpless, narrates this year's talent show.

Debaters became acquainted with today's problems and gained experience in public speaking.

How can we apply the philosophies of Socrates and Plato to modern times? How does man react to a society such as ours? These are only a few of the topics pondered by the Philosophy Club. This year's club, sponsored by Mr. Lindner, delved into the works of great men, analyzing their philosophies of the problems of their times to the problems we face today. In this way they were able to better understand many of the writings of philosophers.

The members of this year's Chess Club, sponsored by Mr. Bennett, not only played chess, but also discussed the various moves involved in the playing of the game. One of the club's main objectives this year was to stimulate the interest in chess by organizing tournaments in which they played against members of Chess Clubs from Forest View and Prospect High Schools.

Students in Individual Speech events competed with many other high schools in such events as radio speaking, poetry and prose reading, serious and comedy play reading, extemporaneous speaking, and original monologue. The District Tournament was held at Forest View. Those members that qualified at the district went to Waukegan for sectional competition. By attending these tournaments, members gained points toward National Forensics League.

Discussion of ideas, programs filled with action, and minds keyed to the future, were common characteristics of Chemistry Club and Math Club.

The projects, along with various speakers, enriched the members' knowledge and opened doors to new horizons. Chemistry Club's purpose was a communication of ideas from one to another, amateur to expert. They had time to develop their own theories and experiment with them as well as with proven statements. Mr. Ring and Mr. Jones were advisors.

Activities of the Math Club involved the design and building of projects. This covered metric Algebra to the construction of electronic computers. Those who entered finished products in Junior Academy of Science fairs and who won, competed in the state contest. Miss Benjamin, sponsor, was very often chauffeur as well as chaperon.

Clubs Help Students To Prepare For Their Futures

Home Economics Careers Club was divided into three committees: Program, Membership, and Refreshment. Each month one of the possible one-hundred-fifty areas of the Home-Ec profession was highlighted. Among the chosen speakers were a buyer for a department store, a home economist for a utilities company, and a kindergarten teacher. The members took several field trips to companies which employ home economists. The club was sponsored by Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Kane. Its officers were Pam Thurman, president; Cathy Combs, vice-president; Joanne Wrobel, secretary; and Cheryl Pagliaro, treasurer.

The Health Careers Club, sponsored by Mrs. Doser, Mrs. Hufnagel, Mr. Leopardo, helped students choose wisely a career in health. The H.C.C. had guest speakers from different areas of work. Most of their field trips to hospitals and offices were independently planned and carried out. The officers were: Sharon O'Brien, president; Nancy Cates, vice-president; Sue Rezner, secretary; and Cathy Ford, treasurer.

Sponsors of Future Teachers of America were Mrs. Moulton, Mr. Grabitz, Mr. Betterman, and Mrs. Helwig, who divided their time in working with the club members. Members learned college qualifications and also did some teaching in various schools in the district. This provided an opportunity to gain experience in working with children and also to discover if teaching was the profession for them. Barbara White, Karen Kindler, and Sandra Schultheis were the officers who co-ordinated the club's activities.

Selling pennants and directories to A.H. students kept National Honor Society members busy. The money that was made went toward their initiation in the spring. Students chosen to be in National Honor Society are those who have received good grades and who have participated in extracurricular activities. Seniors must have a 4.0 grade average and juniors a 4.25 grade average. Sophomores with a 4.5 grade average are eligible for probationary membership.

National Forensics League members attended district, sectional, national speech tournaments and the N.F.L. Student Congress. To be accepted as a member of N.F.L. one must accumulate twenty-five points by competing in any of the various speech contests. Between contests the members also managed to sponsor a coke dance and to put out the traditional National Forensics League calendar.

National Thespian Society is the honor society, nationally renowned, for those students interested in dramatics. To be considered for membership a student must devote one hundred hours to the plays by either acting in them or by working behind the scenes.

Arlington's Marching Band was the first of the bands to display its talents after the opening of the new school year. It played and marched at all of the home football games and gave half-time shows. Sometimes pre-game shows were also given. The Marching Band performed in the Homecoming parade and other parades in which Arlington played a part. Band Day at Northwestern University also saw the marching and playing corps in action.

Students who needed more playing experience before going into Concert Band were put into Cadet Band. Here they received instructions that prepared them to play in the top band.

The Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Schmoyer, played at the operetta given in the spring. In addition to other performances, it played at the February meeting of the Teacher-Parent Council and at the seasonal concerts and assemblies.

The Mixed Chorus, under the direction of Mr. Hicks and Mr. White, is actually a training group for Senior Choir. It is composed mainly of sophomores, and no previous music course is required for the group. In addition to singing at various musical presentations, such as the assembly at Christmas, they sang at the T.P.C. meeting in February.

Combining the best voices to produce the best music was the major concern of Arlington's vocal music department. The directors in the department worked to develop not only the students' singing ability but also their musical knowledge.

Freshman Girls' Chorus was the starting point at Arlington for girls interested in the field of music. The girls learned the techniques of music and developed their abilities in them. This group, accompanied by Sharon Dillon and Jane Hult, sang at several concerts during the school year.

Arlington's two specialized singing groups, Choraliers and Harmonettes, made many outside appearances in addition to those at special school events. Both the Choraliers, led by Mr. Hicks, and the Harmonettes, under the direction of Mr. White, were selected according to their outstanding musical talent. Musical talent was measured in vocal ability for both solo and group singing.

Senior Choir was under the direction of Mr. White this year. Karla Stelling and Martha Hodge accompanied the choir as they sang at school concerts, assemblies, and at outside appearances at junior high schools and convalescent homes.

Freshman Boys' Chorus, open to any freshman boy, was directed by Mr. Hicks this year. They appeared at various concerts during the year accompanied by Carol Freiburg.

This year the Biology Club, sponsored by Mr. Goins, Mr. Knilans, and Mr. Johnson, provided interested students with a place to do extra research in a specific field. The Biology Club's goals this year were to enter projects in the district science fair, to plant new plants and shrubs, and to work to begin a science library.

The vocal groups at Arlington, under the direction of Mr. Boyd White and Mr. John Hicks, brought hours of enjoyment to both students and parents. This year the vocal groups showed their talents by singing everything from sacred hymns to show tunes and folk songs.

The Girls' Glee Club, the concert vocal group in the music department, was composed of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. This group performed at concerts and special events during the year. Mr. White, the director, selected the girls that made up the group.

The Treble Clef was the stepping stone to the Girls' Glee Club and Senior Choir. Mainly composed of underclassmen, this group, directed by Mr. White and Mr. Hicks, trained many students by developing their voices and teaching them new music techniques.

The Revelaires, a comparatively new group at Arlington, was composed of ten boys. Directed by Mr. Boyd White, they were selected on their ability to blend with each other, as well as their ability to sight-read. They could be found singing for many events outside of school.

To promote the fellowship of artists was the purpose of the Art Club, which was sponsored by Mr. Michaelis. The members delved into many fields of art; each student worked on individual projects. To help stimulate student interest in artistic fields, monthly business meetings included slides and art films as a form of entertainment and instruction.

Ham Radio Club members transmitted and received messages over the school's radio. Less experienced students were taught Morse code. Experts and novices enjoyed field trips and movies made possible by the sponsor, Mr. Post.

Astronomy Club has the distinction of possessing the largest reflector of any high school in the state. This year's club has two telescopes at its disposal to help with various projects assigned by the sponsors, Mr. Pumphrey and Mr. Hruby.

Members of the Model Railroad Club met once every two weeks. The students had their own set-ups and met with President Richard Burnes to discuss various problems and accomplishments. The club was given the opportunity to view a number of movies about model and real railroads.

The Bridge Club, under the guidance of Miss Harrod and Mr. Klotz, was an informal group that met weekly. Members not only learned the basic rules of the game but also were able to play the game with inexperienced and experienced players.

Rifle Club, led by president Dave Carl, met weekly at school or at a nearby shooting range. The members of the club learned of safety, sportsmanship, and marksmanship.

Resolute Journalists Meet A Demanding Deadline

The Cardinal, Arlington High's newspaper, was put out every two weeks. The editors planned the layout and gave assignments to the staff, composed of journalism class members. When the dummy was completed it was turned in to Paddock Publications, Arlington's local printer.

Jan Miller was editor-in-chief this year. Both editors and staff members were responsible to her. Due to the move of the former feature editor, Dick Rosholt, Jan took over the layout and copy of the feature page. She also wrote the editorials. Marsha Gray, assistant editor-in-chief, had charge of the editorial page, except for the actual writing of editorials. She also assisted Jan in supervising the production. Copy editor, Candy Fleischhauer, checked copy for errors. News editor, Mike Vitoux, made sure students learned of school events through the news page. Mirrel Kephart, Sports editor, planned the sports page and assigned athletic stories and interviews. Jim Ewart, circulation and photography editor, saw that all pictures were taken. He also sent the paper to former students who subscribe. Advertising editor, Gerry DeZonna, contacted advertisers and laid out ads.

The Cardinal was encouraged by Mr. Jack Martin.

The Cardinal room becomes dead silent as Jan Miller, Marsha Gray, Mirrel Kephart, and Candy Fleischhauer work at checking the copy.

Annual Staff Drives To Beat Ever-Present Deadlines

Enthusiastic Heights members listen intently as Mr. Boesel uses a recent example to enumerate the merits of an organized yearbook.

As soon as the '63 Heights was finished and turned over to the printers, the Heights staff began production of the '64 yearbook.

Mr. Boesel, adviser of the twelve-month-long project, chose five editors: sports, Ross Starek; ids, Joanne Wrobel; picture, Rachel Cummins; class, Cathy Wrobel, and copy editor and editor-in-chief, Barb Condry. Ross's job consisted of taking care of everything pertaining to sports. This included pictures, copy, and laying out the sports section. Joanne's job consisted of making sure that all ids were taken correctly, and that each person got credit in the index for every picture he was in. The duties of scheduling, planning, choosing, and fitting most of the pictures fell to Rachel. Planning class pictures, laying out class pages, and making sure that I.D. pictures were alphabetized correctly was Cathy's job. Barb laid out most of the yearbook and corrected most all the captions, heads, and copy. Together they had the job of choosing the theme and laying the plans for the year ahead. Then the staff carried out the plans into finished products.

The staff had a large variety of jobs. They wrote the captions, headlines, and copy. They alphabetized I.D. pictures, took ids while pictures were taken, and ran errands. They contacted teachers for pictures and sold the yearbooks to students, faculty, cooks, and custodians.

Barb Condry, Phyllis Deu, Margo Seaman, and Rachel Cummins give approving glances as they crop along with engraver, Mr. Wells.

An involved debate concerning suggested revisions for the constitution of the Student Council is guided by President Jack Lindstrom.

Arlington's Student Council was led by President Jack Lindstrom, Vice-President Mack Borgen, Recording Secretary Sue Colvin, Corresponding Secretary Marsha Gray, Traffic Court Chief Justice Bill Anderson, and Parliamentarian Fred Kasl.

One of the Student Council's first projects was to sponsor a party at the beginning of the year to welcome the incoming freshmen. Student Council members sold football shakers at the Homecoming football game. They sponsored the talent show, the winter dance, and fun night. The Council also supported the foreign exchange student, Mine Acemi, from Turkey; and a foster child, Phung Thi Loan, from North Viet Nam. This year the Student Council hosted the West Suburban Association of Student Councils Convention. The Student Council tried to accomplish one of its main goals, to improve the student body's knowledge and interest in Student Council activities.

Arlington's Traffic Court was led by Chief Justice Bill Anderson. Senior Steve Castor, junior Anna Pietrolonardo, sophomore Sue Baughman, and freshman Liza Perschbacher were the associate judges of the court.

The application and issuance of parking stickers were under the direction of Mr. Reat. Tickets given for incorrect parking were settled by the traffic court which helped maintain traffic safety for all the student body.

Triple "S," deriving its name from its three goals: to promote service and spirit and sportsmanship, was headed by Cathy Dean. Triple "S" Board, which played a main role in planning the club's activities consisted of twelve members, three elected from each class.

Four hundred members had a variety of projects this year. To provide an opportunity for new students to meet their classmates, the transfer student party was given during the first week of school. Before Christmas, girls gathered to exchange season's greetings at the Christmas dinner. Adding to the spirit of the season, members made Christmas stockings for children at a Chicago orphanage. Lonely ballads and folk songs characterized the spring Hootenanny presented this year.

Rally Club stated its purpose as: To encourage and promote school spirit. Within the club was the Rally Committee, which consisted of five boys and five girls from each class. Permanent members of Rally Committee are cheerleaders, "A" Club officers, and Rally Club officers, who were president Jackie Kleinofen, vice-president Mack Borgen, secretary Cathy Dean, and treasurer Fred Kasl.

Rally Club encouraged attendance at various sports events by humorous posters, prepared and performed skits for pep assemblies, and constructed huge paper hoops through which the team made entrances at each game.

Playing scrabble in Spanish and visiting the Spanish Consulate in Chicago were on the Spanish Club's agenda this year. Members also listened to poems and plays in Spanish and saw Spanish movies.

Russian Club's program consisted of lectures on communism by speakers, some of whom were from Russia, and a Christmas party.

A field trip to Chicago to see a double feature German movie was offered to German Club.

This year Pan Language Council served to bring the members of the many varied language clubs together. The Council, composed of selected members of the clubs, planned a banquet and organized the entertainment for it.

A Determined Team Enforced By School Spirit

Plunging over the goal line, Varsity quarterback, Jim Ewert scores an important touchdown in this year's exciting homecoming game.

Junior halfback, Jerry Culbertson, is tackled by a swarm of opponents after receiving a handoff and sprinting for a decisive gain.

Hoping for praise but getting the opposite, Varsity football player, Ed Lemar, gets a pep talk and is then back in at a decisive moment.

Tackling Is Their Job

After ending last year's season with two wins and a tie, the Cards finished this year with a zero and eight season record. Head Coach Allen, a newcomer to Arlington, looked to '64 with hope for a Cardinal comeback. One of the determining factors of the season was the lack of experience. The team had only eight returning lettermen, none of whom were regulars. On the positive side, Arlington excelled in kicking with the aid of all-conference half-back Tom Fageron. Other outstanding players included center Mirrel Kephart and quarterback Jim Ewart.

The Cardinals can be proud of the high team morale and spirit of the Cards' backers toward the team even at the end of the losing season.

The prospects for next year are further heightened by the success of the sophomore and freshman teams. Combining the best offense with the second best defense in the conference, the Frosh-Soph, under Coach Bill Daletski, won seven and lost one to tie for the conference championship. Both freshman teams had an excellent year.

Lofty Jumps, Spirited Yells, They Cheer Our Cards

Who were those girls that openly showed and promoted school spirit? Who were those girls that enthusiastically backed the Cardinal teams? Who were those noisy girls, anyway? They were, of course, the A.H. varsity and frosh-soph cheerleaders.

The girls of this year's varsity squad were the first Arlington cheerleaders to wear the new gored pleated skirts paired with matching V-neck sweaters. Led by Sue Colvin, the varsity cheerleaders consisted of Stasia Wit, Kathy Lill, Lynne Brodahl, Gayle Watland, Sue Heitz, Rhonda Roberts, and Kathy O'Gorman. The frosh-soph squad included Lynn Larson, Betty Ball, Cindy Flodin, Sue Johnson, Cindy Frandsen, Joy Hruska, Ann Terhune, and Sue Chodera. These girls were chosen because they exhibited the Cardinal spirit in pep, appearance, and performance. This year they also sponsored a Conference Cheerleader tea with the purpose of promoting better relationships between schools and exchanging ideas.

Whether leading the student body in cheers at pep assemblies, painting posters for upcoming games, selling Homecoming mums, or directing the Homecoming Coronation, the A.H. cheerleaders promoted the spirit of their school!

Wearily sprinting into the finish chute, varsity cross country runner, John Brunner, finishes another victorious race in a conference meet.

Triumphantly sprinting to victory, Verne Gongel helps the Frosh-Soph Cross Country squad put another victory in the record book.

Under the coaching of Russ Attis, the Varsity coach, and John Gardner, Frosh-Soph, the harriers won only three meets. Coach Attis' only returning letterman, John Brunner, ran many victories for the Varsity squad.

After suffering from lack of manpower and experience in the 1962-1963 season, the Cardinal harriers, this year, showed improvement in every respect. As seen by the difference in the number of meets the team won this year, their record was much improved. Paul Fiegan and John Bloomquist led the Sophomores in many of their victories.

This season the Varsity squad finished the season with three victories and eight losses. However, all of its victories came at the expense of non-conference schools. This is not a true estimate of the ability of the Cross Country men as seen by the Frosh-Soph scores. In the Frosh-Soph meets they won seven and lost four.

In the conference meet John Brunner finished fourth; thus, he was the only Arlington harrier who earned the privilege of entering the state meet, where he took fourth.

As tension in the crowd comes to a climax, Senior Dan Sherman tries to outjump an opponent during the final seconds of a game.

Bounce And Swish

When the middle of November finally arrived many eager Arlington cagers found themselves fighting to survive the large cuts which were needed in order to organize the basketball team. There was quite a change from last year in the basketball coaching staff. Ted Wissen took over the head post as varsity coach; Mr. Allen became junior varsity coach; and Ted Ecker changed from junior varsity coach to freshman A coach. Only Robert Baker remained in his same position, frosh-soph coach.

Leading varsity competitors this year included Seniors Paul Splittorff, Dan Sherman, and Jim Jakubiec. Paul Splittorff, varsity forward, earned the only all-conference award for the team. Three juniors, Chuck Lloyd, Mike Frase, and Bob Conner, played regularly for the varsity and should add ability and experience to the next year's squad. The frosh-soph team was headed by Bruce Hubbard, Tom Sloan, and Jim Jorgensen. They finished the season with a final record of four and fourteen, but captured first place in the Wheaton Tournament.

This year's freshman teams, led by coaches Ted Ecker and Bob Knilans, finished the year with a very impressive undefeated season. They ended the year by capturing the championship in the Barrington Tournament. This year's excellent showing by the freshman squad made the future for Arlington's varsity basketball teams appear brighter.

Trying to protect his teammate, Chuck Lloyd makes sure that Jim Jakubiec will be able to hold on to the ball, a valuable object.

Precision Marchers & Twirlers Present Unique Routines

Under the direction of Mrs. Lynn Chapin, the Coronets and Cardettes practiced daily during the school year and regularly last summer. Membership in these groups is achieved through tryouts held during the spring. This year the Coronets consisted of fifty-one students, sixteen of which belonged to Cardettes and nine of which composed the Color Guard.

Accompanied by bright music, the dazzling baton twirling performances displayed by the Cardettes added to the cheerful spirit of Arlington's varsity games this year. At half-time, Cardinal football and basketball enthusiasts were thrilled by the unique precision routines presented by the Coronets, which is Arlington High School's girls' drill team.

At various contests in which they participated during the summer of '63, the Coronets received two second place awards, in spite of heavy competition. The prize winning group was headed this year by senior Co-captains Dawn Nebel and Marge Engelking. Donned in their bright red uniforms, which are topped by the well-known plumed cocked hats, the Coronets presented their unique interpretations of familiar tunes.

In addition to their skillful twirling exhibitions, the Cardettes are noted for their colorful pom-pom routines. Senior co-captains Diane Jacques and Rae Sander led the vivacious twirlers in many sparkling performances during the many athletic events and parades in the school year.

Coached by Julius Flichler, this year's varsity wrestling team finished the season with an eight and seven record. Several of last year's lettermen returned to help boost the squad's potential. Some of these included Sophomore Scott Brown, and Seniors Bob Conti, John Hermes, Bill Anderson, and Randy Opela. Three of this year's wrestlers attained all-conference by defeating all but one of the conference wrestlers in their own weight division. They were Bob Conti 120 weight round class; Bill Anderson, 138; and Randy Opela, 180. Both Bob Conti and Bill Anderson earned the privilege of participating in the State Meet held at Northwestern University by placing second in both the District and Sectional Tournaments. These contests are the elimination tournaments preceding the State Meet. Other top senior varsity grapplers were Gary Moreau, Ken Rousek, and Steve Castor. Doug Duss, Chuck Hood, and Ray Herda, three juniors, wrestled regularly on the varsity squad and should be back next year to give the team added experience and ability. Two sophomores, Mark Frase and Scott Brown also participated for the varsity.

Finishing last year's season as the freshmen co-champs of the West Suburban Conference, the sophomores didn't have as good a year. This year's squad was led again by Coach Guy Venna and had many outstanding wrestlers on the team. Chip Douglas, Bruce Conti, and Gary Peters were the team's scoring leaders.

This year's freshmen, coached by John Fish, finished second only to Downers Grove on the West Suburban Conference. Several outstanding wrestlers, including Robert Ungaro and Brad Somers, led the frosh team to victory.

Earnestly trying to hang on for a needed victory, varsity grappler, John Hermes, prepares to counter his opponent's move with a trip.

Tankmen Float On

By losing many senior lettermen at graduation, the swimming team was seriously hurt during this season. As a result of their many disadvantages, they only gained one victory. This victory came against Elgin in the last of their seven meets.

Throughout the year many school records were broken by the varsity team. Junior Greg Inman set a new record in the backstroke. He also competed as an individual medley swimmer. In the free style division of fifty and one hundred yards, Sophomore Dick Tucker also set new records. Other contributors to the varsity included Sophomore Greg Stafford in the distance events, Paul Hembd as a butterfly swimmer, Junior John Malmquist and Jim Kimbuger, divers, and Senior Jay Davis, breaststroke.

The Frosh-Soph team won two of its seven meets; one of these victories was against a strong Riverside-Brookfield team. Since many of the sophomores competed on the varsity level this year, the majority of the team was frosh.

Rings, High Bars, And Horses Offer Challenges

Performing a difficult maneuver easily, Reid Olson, State Champion as a sophomore, shows the style which won him the State Title.

This year's varsity gymnasts were again directed by Coach Tom Walthouse. Junior Reid Olsen, the 1963 State Rings Champion, headed the list as one of the team's top scorers, and proved, once again, to be a top competitor for the state title. Seniors Ron Harstad and Ulrich Geisler strengthened the team's hope of capturing a state title, by performing on both the parallel bars and the high bar. Sophomore Jim Johannesen showed his prowess by performing in the high bar event on the varsity level. The trampoline was another strong spot in the Card's roster. It was worked by juniors Conley Stewart and Gary Holveck, who were both strong contenders for the conference and state titles. Senior Bob Broome dominated the side horse, and seniors Jack Romme and Dick Rossiter the tumbling event.

This year's frosh-soph team, coached by Wayne Selvig, proved to be as determined to win as the varsity team. Some of the most promising members of the squad were Roy Rettberg, rings; Steve Lcvan, side horse; Tom Reising, trampoline, and Bert Schmidt, all-around.

The freshman team showed its ability by capturing the first place titles in the two freshman invitational meets.

Going through a practice routine, senior all-around, Ron Harstad, gets ready for an important upcoming conference gymnastic meet.

Sportsmanship Is Upheld By The Varsity Lettermen

Performing spirited leadership Tom Fagerson, Jim Ewart, and Jim Jakubiec lead the "A" club, a group for Arlington's honor athletes.

Existing as a club for honor athletes, this year's "A Club" was engaged in many activities. Their leadership came from the 1963-64 officers: Tom Fagerson; president; Jim Ewart, vice-president; and Jim Jakubiec, secretary-treasurer.

Beginning the year with strong school spirit, "A Club" sold football raffle tickets and sponsored the Homecoming Dance. For another school benefit, the group bought a movie projector for the athletic department, to be used by all competitive sports in the school.

"A Club," also had many activities which were for the benefit of the club's members rather than the school. The club planned for and attended a Chicago Blackhawks ice-hockey game at Chicago Stadium for members only. To make the trip especially attractive to the athletes the club paid for all expenses out of its treasury. The club also held several dances that were for club members only. As a spring activity the "A Club" held its annual picnic in early May.

To be a member of "A Club" an athlete must earn a letter and participate in several workdays as a pledge. These required workdays are used to benefit the school.

Every seventh period during this school year and numerous times after school, music echoed from the foyer as thirty-one leotard-clad Orchesis members executed exercises and practiced dances for future performances. Membership in Orchesis was achieved through tryouts which were held in the spring of the preceding year.

At the assemblies preceding the holidays and half-time at basketball games, the Orchesis regularly presented creative dances based on both light and serious themes, which coincided with the general topic of the assembly or the sporting events.

Orchesis was instructed this year by Miss Judy Whitney who presided over the officers' meetings. Senior Jan Miller was elected president of Orchesis and Nona Thomas, a junior, was vice-president.

Under the direction of Mrs. Doser and Miss Bolt, G.R.A. members participated in competitive tennis, volleyball, basketball, and softball games. Points for G.R.A. pins were awarded on the basis of the hours participated in these various sports.

The G.R.A. Board, which consisted of thirteen members, five of whom were officers, planned and executed activities. G.R.A. was headed this year by president Janice Unander and the vice-president Cheryl Pagliaro.

Stealing Their Victories

Led again by Coach Bob Baker, the Arlington varsity nine had one of the best pitching staffs in the ever difficult West Suburban Conference. Seniors Paul Splittorff and Dave Christensen topped the staff, and it was completed by Juniors Jim Kroll, John Friedl, and Rick Miller. Newcomers Jerry Fink, Rick Hoppe, and Tom Jasper, who led last year's Frosh-Soph squad, filled out the team's few vacancies. Returning letterman, who played in the infield last season, were Junior Mike Frase, Senior Ed Leman, and catcher Jim Ewart helped balance out the team.

Coach Baker's nine finished a respectable second in the tough West Suburban conference last season with a record of eight wins and only six defeats. This season was entered with the hope of improving their reputable record of last year.

This year Steve Chernicky replaced former coach, Bus Ormsbee at the helm of the Frosh-Soph squad. The Redbirds and Mr. Chernicky entered this season with high hopes of improving their previous record. The young Redbirds were led by James Wittington and Jim Jorgenson.

Arlington's 1963 varsity tennis team had an experienced, well-balanced attack. They rolled to a great season record and virtually ran off with the district championship and conference championship.

This year's varsity team, piloted by Coach Ken Schaller, began another successful and rewarding season in the West Suburban Conference. An extreme interest in this strenuous and active sport kept the boys practicing in the fall, winter, and early spring months to be ready for the regularly scheduled competition. When spring finally rolled around, the boys were well prepared and anxious to participate. Many of the hopes of the varsity team were based on returning lettermen—Mirrel Kephart, Jim Jakubiec, and Rick Wollerman. Others producing fine individual and team records were leading junior players, Greg Inman, Jeff Peek, Bob Von Boeckmann, and Harley Gates.

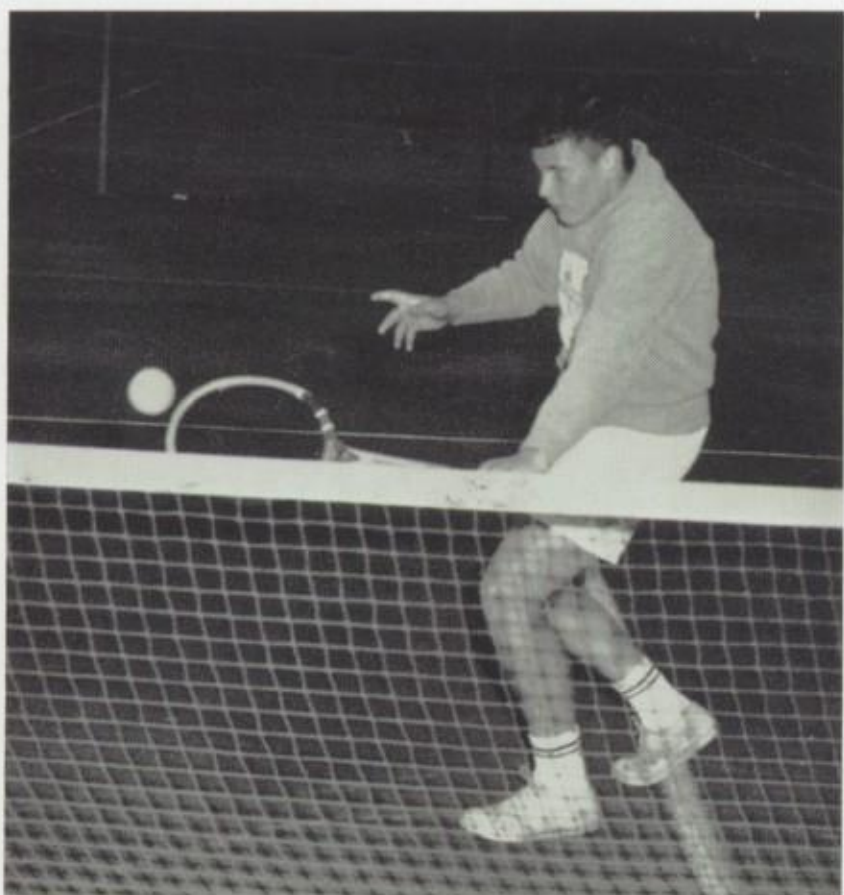

The 1964 tennis schedule included eight dual meets plus the conference, district, and state meets. Each conference school played each of the other schools one time, while during the season there was a possibility of collecting thirty-five points, and a good team could gain fifteen additional points at the conference meet. This tournament brought the total number of possible points to fifty.

Frosh-soph team members, under newly appointed director Coach Robert Knilians, turned in a fine, high scoring record. Sophomore players Brian Burke, Dave Milligan, Bob Milhouser, and Craig Butler, proved to be four boys who showed promise for their future years at Arlington.

Teeing Up Victories

Both the varsity and frosh-soph golf squads were coached this year by Mr. Stack, who replaced Mr. Clendenny. Under Mr. Clendenny the squad did excellently, earning the privilege of competing in the state meet.

Practically all of last year's lettermen returned this year. Darryl Burkett, Bob Armour, and Roger O'Neil had another outstanding season in 1964. On their clubs rested the weight of the varsity squad. Other returning lettermen included Pete Johnson and Fred Devin.

The frosh-soph squad had three 1963 freshmen who proved to be outstanding again this year as sophomores. Roger Baer, number one man, Jon Keys, and Rick Price were the only regular players for the squad. The remaining four positions on the first squad were divided among the other team members.

At the first breath of spring, the golf team began to practice, first on the practice tee in school; and when it became warmer outside, they traveled to Golden Acres Country Club. The team this year used Golden Acres as the course for all the home golf rounds. Practice, however, was often interrupted by spring showers and had to be held again in the school's practice range. This practice range served as the answer to the rainy day course and as the location for the golfers to sharpen up their driving.

Cindermen Are On The Right Track This Season

Rhythmically and skillfully achieving his goal, junior high-jumper Scott Somers, helps lift the track team to an overwhelming victory.

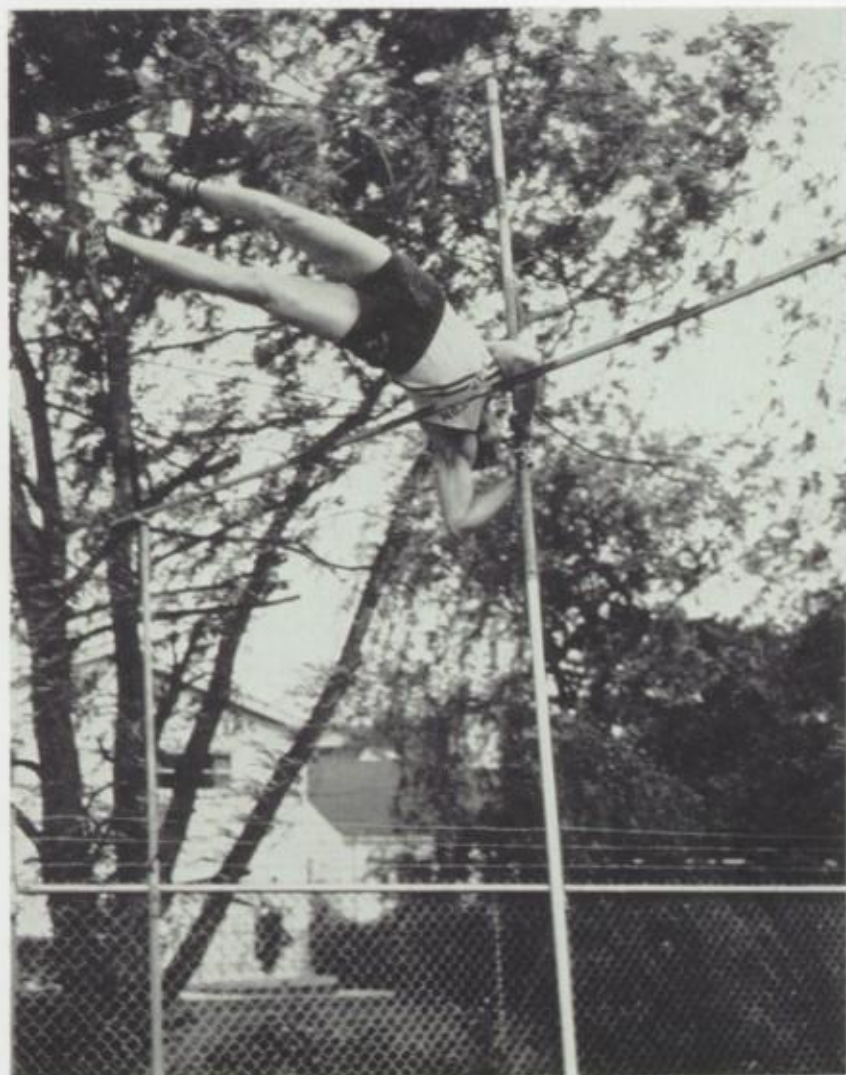

This year, Arlington's varsity track team was again expertly coached, advised, and directed by Coach Russ Attis. During the season Coach Attis coordinated all of the team activities and also checked individual progress.

The returning lettermen were some of the top-point-getters on the team this year. Seniors Tom Fageron, pole vaulter; Bill Baumgart, hurdler; Jeff Hoy, high jumper; Bill Truax, state known shot putter and discus thrower; and junior John Brunner, miler; made up a partial list of Cardinal competitors, who helped to strengthen Coach Attis' team. Also predominant in the team running attack were juniors J. J. Jamison and Chuck Hood, and seniors Mike East and Paul Splitberger.

In addition to the scheduled meets, there was the conference meet, the district meet, and the state meet, as well as relays and several non-conference meets. This year the thinclads were contenders for the sought after conference and state titles.

The Frosh-Soph thinclads, who were also coached by Coach Attis, made fine showings in all events and at the conference and district meets. Sophomores Bob Yeazel and Steve Ewart both held considerable promise to be two of Arlington's fine runners in future years. Another soph Chip Douglas, showed his prowess in the shot-put event.

Hoping to help lift his team to a victory, senior pole-vaulter, Tom Fagerson, exerts an extraordinary effort for the varsity track team.

Serious Seniors Set Their Sites On Future Goals

Why did members of the Class of 1964 sit in the first three rows of bleachers at football games? Because of their senior priority, of course! Seniors could be recognized because they controlled the foyer, ran numerous organizations, elected candidates for the Homecoming Court, and sat on the main floor at assemblies. As a final official act as Seniors, they donned their caps and gowns to receive diplomas on graduation night.

Except in cases when special committee meetings were necessary, the Senior Class Board held its regular meetings on the first and third Mondays of every month. Although there were elected representatives from each homeroom, any senior with a desire to serve his class was welcome as a member. Leading the class in all of its activities were officers of the Board, Bob Conti, president; Nancy Hey, vice-president; Candy Fleischhauer, recording secretary; Scott Banks, treasurer; and Steve Castor, traffic court judge.

As winter approached, seniors began to establish many committees in preparation of Arlington's annual Christmas Ball. "Snowbound," the title of a poem by John Greenleaf Whittier, a famous American poet, was chosen as the title of the dance. Snowbanks, evergreen trees, large red paper bells, and a sleigh laden with Christmas presents were among the decorations that enhanced the boys' gym and set the mood of the ball. Profits went towards the purchase of the senior gift.

Varied opinions of what to give Arlington High School as a gift from the Class of '64 confronted officers of the Board. Innumerable discussions were held to decide on an appropriate memento to be purchased with funds from the class treasury.

Senior Bermuda Day is an important event for many members of the graduating class each year. Reverting to bicycles as its mode of transportation, the Class of 1964 pedaled merrily to school. Bermuda clad seniors took part in traditional festivities of this day, while teachers and librarians looked on with mixed emotions.

Officers and members of the Senior Class Board worked long hours in coming up with an original and fun-filled theme for the Senior Class Party. The Board agreed on a party with skits performed by seniors as the entertainment. Free refreshments were to be served also. Every senior was welcome. This was the last chance for many seniors to get together with fellow classmates before graduation and summer vacation would separate them.

Solemnly, 1964 graduates walked down Arlington High's aisle. Later they would remember moments of high school living never again to be experienced except in memories.

Bob Conti, Nancy Hey, Scott Banks, and Candy Fleischhauer hold the reins which guide the senior class board.

Triumphant Seniors Slip The Grip Of A.H.S.

Garbed in bright summer sportswear, cycling seniors arrive early to prepare for the gala festivities of Arlington's Senior Bermuda Day!

Seniors Bid Adieu

Crash! Senior basketball star Paul Splitorff jumps through the hoop to begin another game with the Cardinals hoping for a victory.

"Yonder, small sophomore; carry the trays away!" commands senior Louie Provost, using his priority over "A" Club pledge Bob Yeazel.

Miss Johnson helps seniors Walt Bray and Scott Banks with their financial difficulties for the next year.

Juniors Use Their Initiative, Striving For Service

These juniors eagerly approve a proposal suggested by one of their classmates, as Harley Gates and Dave Murphy conduct the meeting.

The juniors are the first class not to hold class board elections, but to have all juniors interested in serving the class on the board.

The Junior Class Board, under the direction of President Dave Murphy, Vice-President Jim Hallet, Secretary Harley Gates, Treasurer Lynne Broderick, and Traffic Court Justice Anna Pietrolonardo, introduced a new type of government to its class this year. Its purpose was to get a true picture of what the entire class wanted and thought, and to give each class member his chance to be heard.

Any member of the class of '65 was eligible for membership on the Class Board. To be a voting member, one needed to have attended two-thirds of the total number of meetings.

To give all consideration and respect to any idea that was brought up at a meeting, the Board usually opened it for a discussion in which the entire board participated. If no general agreement could be made, it was referred to a committee where it was further narrowed or expanded upon as necessary. The committee then reported its tentative conclusions or ideas to the board for discussion and for a vote.

The Junior Class started its year's projects with the first all-school dance of the year — The Kickoff Dance, "1-9-6-3 Hike," sponsored annually by that year's junior class. One of the largest masses of students in Arlington's history turned out to help decorate for the Dance. Committees were organized to take care of stringing pennants, hanging streamers, building the football, making favors, and baking cookies.

Next in line of Junior Class projects was the administration of a football concession. The Junior Class, working to create greater school loyalty, organized its concession in such a manner that each person bought food for the benefit of his class. President Murphy reported that everything was sold except the machinery and the Junior Class Board sponsor, Mr. Carioti. The prize of ten dollars, taken from the treasury of '65, was rewarded to the freshman class for its vast consumption of hot dogs, pop corn, candy, and pop.

The Junior Class again strived further toward their goal, that of promoting greater school spirit, when it organized a committee to confer with the cheerleaders in November of 1963.

The last official act of the juniors was to sponsor and organize the Junior-Senior Prom as a farewell gift to the seniors. "Moonlight and Roses" was held late in May.

Heading the first open class board are juniors Lynn Broderick, Harley Gates, Jim Hallet and Dave Murphy. Not pictured is Anna Pietrolonardo.

Under Upperclassmen

Supervising the making of the traditional red and white paper roses for the Homecoming coronation assembly is the chairman Kathy Lill.

After baking dozens of cookies, Becky Johnston and Jan Beckman contribute their last to the Kickoff Dance by taking down a poster.

With one year's experience of high school life, the Sophomore Class found the corridors less crowded and the maze of classrooms less confusing.

Being faced with the responsibility of presenting the 1965 Prom, the Class of '66 turned most of its attention to the raising of funds by the various class activities. In the fall the Sophomore Class sponsored several football concessions, and presented the annual fall turnabout. Using the theme of "Sadie Hawkins," a unique atmosphere was present at the dance. Besides the projects to raise money for presenting next year's Junior-Senior Prom, the sophomores did several service projects that benefited the entire student body.

Advising the sophomores with projects and individual problems as well as the difficulties faced by the entire class, were Mrs. Claney, Miss Bazik, and Mr. Erikson. These counselors devoted their time to insure the success of the Sophomore Class by urging all sophomores to participate in the class board projects.

Leading Arlington's largest class this year was Greg Alexander, president; Kathy Katovich, vice-president; Anne Terhune, secretary; Roy Rettburg, treasurer; and Sue Baughman, the sophomore class' traffic court judge.

Frightened Frosh Become Experienced High Schoolers

"You can always tell a freshman during the first few school days by the load of books he is carrying," state upper classmen. However, after a few weeks of classes, most freshmen gave up this distracting habit and started to enjoy the strange life of an A.H.S. student.

Last fall school life commenced for the freshmen with the election of class officers. The all-girl board was headed by president Jane Hult; vice-president, Lynn Larson; secretary, Janet Weber; treasurer, Barb Johnson; and finally traffic court judge, Lisa Pershbacher.

Starting the social aspect of high school, the Student Council gave a party for the freshmen. Various clubs provided the entertainment. This party was one way in which the freshmen were able to become acquainted with their fellow students.

In December, the class sponsored a concession with the hope of filling the empty treasury. To increase the treasury, the class sponsored the spring turnabout.

Throughout the entire school year the freshmen class showed that it would uphold the traditions of Arlington. They showed their school spirit by the way they participated in the class board and other available activities.

Thoughts Of The Staff - Thankful And Relieved

"It's done!" gasp tired members of the Heights staff and sponsor Mr. Boesel, as they get a refreshing breath of air.

This publication, representing twelve months of work, is only as good as the effort put into it. The staff feels that in this year's Heights, we have tried to the best of our ability to represent Arlington's school life and activities. This publication could never have been possible without the tireless devotion of our advisor, Mr. Robert Boesel. We of the 1963-64 Heights staff would like to take this opportunity to thank him.

This year's editor-in-chief, Barb Condry, planned the rough draft of the book, fitted copy, and supervised the staff members. In the picture department Rachel Cummins took on the tasks of planning all pictures, scheduling them for certain days, and cropping them after they were developed. Sports was put into the hands of Ross Starek. He took care of everything, pictures and copy, in the sports section. Joanne Wrobel's job as idents editor consisted of putting together the student and organizational indices, checking all idents, and organizing the lists of senior activities. Cathy Wrobel served as class editor and assembled all of the class I.D. pictures, class board pictures, and senior photos.

Our staff worked closely with Mrs. Marge Brooks of Root Studios. Our thanks to her. Another close helper of the staff was Mr. Larry Wells, the representative of Associates Engraving Company, we wish to thank him too.

To our printer, Paddock Publications, we express our gratitude. We would especially like to thank Mr. Lou Tanner and George Christensen of Paddock Publications.

Finally the editors would like to take this opportunity to thank the following people, the '63-'64 Heights staff, for all the time and work they gave to the Heights:
